ABSTRACT

In this article, in the 19th and 20th centuries, the Khiva literary media and its prominent figures, as well as Abdurazzak Faqiri, one of the poets living and living in Khiva, tried to cover the way of life, creativity and consciousness. The atmosphere of this high level had a positive impact on the worldview of Abdurazzak Faqiri. In the heart of Faqiri, there is a strong belief and love for literature. But Faqiri was not a full represent at or of this literature, but because of his interest in Navoi's poetry and poetry nutrition, he has created synchronic poetry for Sufism as Mashrab, Sufi Olloyor, Ubaydiy. Many of his closest researchers have suggested that the most intelligent of the Central Asian kings was Feruz. Muhammad Rahimhon's khanate dates from 1863 to 1910. For example, Tabibi, who was a prominent figure in poetry, was appointed chief of the palace poets. Doi was a preacher of the mosque for his honesty and loyalty. The atmosphere of this high level had a positive impact on the worldview of Abdurazzak Faqiri. In the heart of Faqiri, there is a strong belief and love for literature.

LITERATURE, THE “FORSAKEN” RESOURCE OF TEACHING EFL/ESL: AN APPRAISAL

ABSTRACT

In this paper, it is argued that the exclusion of literary texts in the teaching-learning of English as a Foreign Language (EFL) and as Second Language (ESL) curricula has serious disadvantages and therefore literature should be included in EFL and ESL syllabi at all levels, especially the secondary and tertiary levels of education in non-Anglophone countries. Accordingly, the background against which exclusion of literary writing in EFL/ESL curricula took place (Section 1) is given, the disadvantages of such exclusion are identified (Section 2), the rationale for inclusion of literary texts in these curricula is explained (Section 3), the concept of “literary competence” and the criteria for selection of texts are discussed and illustrated (Section 4), and finally demonstrate how a sample prose narrative can be exploited in teaching English as a foreign or second language at the tertiary level (Section 5). This is followed by a few concluding remarks (Section 6). Thus, the main argument in this paper is in favour of incorporating literary texts in EFL/ESL curricula, drawn from poetry, fictional narratives, one-act plays and/or full-length plays.

ABSTRACT

Teaching is a noble profession by which children are trained at primary level and secondary level and students are trained in colleges and universities at a higher level. Learning is a process by which students learn so many things to grow physically, mentally and morally. Teachers use various methods, approaches, strategies and techniques to teach their students at every level. When it comes to a second or a foreign language, particularly English, there are certain methods, approaches and techniques followed by teachers in English language classrooms. There are various teaching methods and approaches designed by constant evaluation and observations. Prominent among them are Grammar Translation, Method, Direct Method, Audio-Lingual Method and Communicative Language Teaching Approach (CLT) and also there are various techniques and strategies implemented by teachers to make English language learning flexible and attractive. Though teachers employ these methods, approaches and techniques in EL classrooms, still there is a gap between teacher and learner. Over the years, there was a demand for unifying approach to language teaching. The Eclectic approach is the solution and it is a method that integrates various approaches and methodologies in English language teaching. This approach depends on the aims of the lesson and the abilities of the learners. This research paper explores the advantages and disadvantages of the Eclectic approach in the teaching of English as a foreign language and also the popularity of this approach in ELT in the 21st century is also discussed in a comprehensive way. This paper also examines various aspects of Eclectic approach and how they are useful for teachers in English language classrooms.
