ABSTRACT

The article discusses the social function of language, its place in society, cultural concepts, national values, customs, traditions and their transmission to the next generation. The linguocultural features of the Turkic languages, in particular Uzbek, were discussed. The semantics of some lexical units during the period of the ancient Uzbek literary language, linguistic and cultural possibilities, national values, their significance in the expression of views are described. In addition to the denotative meaning in lexical units, the way of life of the Uzbek people, typical examples explain the reflection of concepts related to human relations. It was emphasized that the national language should be appreciated, considered as a means of communication and a reality that collects and expresses national values.
