ABSTRACT

In the article, the concept of professional affiliation was first studied linguistically in the context of professional communication. It was argued that the basis of any affiliation is linguistic affiliation. In the process of professional socialization, a person enters a relevant group, acquiring certain professional knowledge and skills, gaining professional experience, norms and values, professional community language. Some look down on cleaners, especially for young people, as the cleaner is a servant, mostly young people working in the organization where I work. I am heartbroken by their indifference to the work of cleaners. In particular, the author of the article thinks that the opportunities for people to share and develop a common language, experience, values, social space and time in communication through modern means of communication have greatly expanded.
