ABSTRACT

The article discusses the role of public procurement in the national economy in the context of the pandemic, the wider introduction of modern forms and methods of procurement, the prevention of corruption and a number of similar measures. Further development of public procurement plays an important role in the efficient use of budget funds. Because today public procurement is an important factor in the socio-economic development of the country, the timely provision of recipients of funds from state bodies, the state budget and state trust funds with necessary and affordable goods and services. This saves both time and finance for public procurement participants.
