ABSTRACT

In this article, the content of oykodomonym, the relevance of their linguistic study, is illustrated by the example of the names of buildings in the city of Urgench. Significant buildings have been linguistically analyzed in depth. The word "universal" is derived from the Latin word "universalias," which means "universal, multifaceted." It is so named because of the variety of products sold in this mall. Although the name appears on the entrance of the building, it is not called "Universal" due to the social nature of the language.
