ABSTRACT

Raising children is one of the main tasks they should start with their parents without seeing the world. While pre-school education for young children is mainly with their parents, later educational work will continue with their teachers. The right teaching methodology chosen in the primary school will play an important role in children's future learning and personal development. From previously published textbooks, we can learn the following: "Method-based education is a tool for teachers to develop the moral beliefs, moral habits, skills, etc. of adolescents and young people. Education is a very complex process that reflects the socio-political life of each era. Its methods, forms, means, and factors have evolved over the centuries and become a tradition. Thus, in the process of upbringing, the teacher addresses the age and individual characteristics of the students in order to solve any educational problem in the interests of the individual student or the class.
