ABSTRACT

In addition to increasing the lexical richness of the Uzbek language, dialects also played an important role in the formation of its grammatical structure, phonetic and grammatical standardization of the literary language. Uzbek dialects have their own semantic, phonetic and grammatical features. In this article, the rhyming words found in Navoi regional and Kipchak dialects are compared with other Uzbek dialects and materials of the Uzbek literary language and analyzed in lingvoareal, comparative-historical, descriptive methods.
