ABSTRACT

This article deals with the importance of the teaching profession in society, the attention paid to it and the growth of the status, honor and dignity of teachers in our country. Although he was a disciple of Aristotle, known throughout the world as the first teacher, he acknowledged the wisdom of the elders and learned much from our people. During the years of independence, raising the prestige of the work of coaches, the main executor of education, the prestige of teachers has also become one of the important issues within the government. In this process, the teacher suffers a lot, experiences hardships. That is why students should feel indebted to the teacher for life. Even if a student achieves a royal position, it is worthwhile to serve the teacher.

INTRODUCTION

The teaching profession has been glorified since ancient times, and the scholars of the East, in their invaluable spiritual heritage, have shown boundless respect and reverence for the Master and embodied in their image the image of a perfect man who can be an example to all. At the same time, there are a number of requirements for these professionals, including the following requirements for teacher etiquette in Navoi's Mahbub-ul-qulub:

- The teacher should not treat children according to the position and wealth of their parents;
- The teacher should teach children what they know, not try to teach what they do not know;
- Defects such as arrogance, pride, greed, ignorance are qualities that are alien to the teacher's ethics;

- The teacher must stay away from bad deeds, impurity;
- Teachers, who are considered scientists in the eyes of the people, should be able to refrain from bad deeds and corruption.

One of the oldest manuscripts in the world, the Book of Avesto, which was created on our soil 30 centuries ago, reads: Education should be the most important pillar of life. It is necessary to bring up every young person in such a way that he first rises to the highest level by organizing good reading and songwriting.

According to Greek historians, Alexander the Great had a conversation with the elders of the people when he was shooting from a country between two rivers. Although he was a disciple of Aristotle, known throughout the world as the first teacher, he acknowledged the wisdom of the elders and learned much from our people. One day, when Alexander was asked why he valued his teacher more than his father, he replied: My father raised my body and brought it down from heaven to earth. My Master, on the other hand, nurtured my spirit and raised it from earth to heaven.

Indeed, the role of teachers in the development of great scholars is invaluable. The minister and scholar Abu Nasr ibn Iraq saw a boy on the outskirts of the city, immediately noticing his talent and raising him. Abu Nasr shows paternal love to the child and teaches him as a teacher. This child grows up and is known to the world as an encyclopedic scholar Abu Rayhan Beruni.

The teacher-student Mirzo Ulugbek and Ali Kushchi embody many wisdom of life. Mirzo Ulugbek, Ali Kushchi was dedicated to growing up as a leading scientist, and the student showed dedication in promoting his teacher's scientific heritage to the world.

Yes, when we say a teacher, we mean a radiant image of selfless people who bring up people who contribute to the peace of the country, the prosperity of the Motherland and the well-being of the people. Thankfully, thanks to the services of such teachers, a harmoniously developed generation is growing up in our country, laying the foundation stones for the great future of Uzbekistan. During the years of independence, raising the prestige of the work of coaches, the main executor of education, the prestige of teachers has also become one of the important issues within the government. This has expanded the ranks of dedicated teachers, inspiring the teaching community to creative endeavors. Thanks to the hard work of our teachers, today's schools in Uzbekistan are becoming the cradle of true virtues, the threshold of recruitment to greatness.

Many talented students of our country take high places in international science Olympiads, music and art festivals, sports competitions. Teachers of such students, who spread the fame of our country to the world, deserve the Hero of Uzbekistan, People's Teacher and other high awards of our Motherland.

After all, the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Sh. Mirziyoyev, while giving the necessary instructions to raise the prestige of the teacher, said in a video conference on June 21, 2018 that I do not respect those who do not respect the teacher. Such attention to the teacher will definitely serve the development and prosperity of the country.

Following the adoption of the Presidential Decree No. PQ-3931 of September 5, 2018 on measures to introduce new principles of governance in the public education system, the law No. ID-1852 on the status of a teacher was adopted in accordance with this decision. It is safe to say that the fact that the law guarantees the honor and dignity of teachers has encouraged teachers in our country to work more diligently, not to lag behind the requirements of the times, and to help their students to become full-fledged adults in the future.

In addition, the increase in teachers' salaries by an average of 2.5 times over the past three years, the introduction of additional incentives for teachers working in remote areas, serve to increase the willingness of dedicated teachers to work harder and achieve greater success in education.

From the above considerations, it is clear that the teaching profession is not only difficult but also honorable. At this point, the question arises as to what is his hardship and what is his honor. We found it necessary to answer this question with the following thoughts of Navoi, that is, in his opinion, sometimes one person is unable to bring up one child, and the teacher teaches science to several children. In this process, the teacher suffers a lot, experiences hardships. That is why students should feel indebted to the teacher for life. Even if a student achieves a royal position, it is worthwhile to serve the teacher.

From this point of view, a person who loves his profession and enjoys his work is truly happy. Awakening every morning with the desire to see a few disciples, to contribute to the upbringing of the next generation, and to send compassion to innocent hearts is the pinnacle of happiness.
