ABSTRACT

Good governance has emerged as a robust idea in international organizations such as the world bank, UNDP, OECD, ADB. In the lacking of right governance, there are no development programs that can improve the standard of lifetime of citizens. On the alternative hand ,when state muscle is not utilise properly, it is the poor who suffering the foremost, as bad governance breed and increases corruption, poverty and so on in the lives of the poor. The impression of good governance plays a dominant contribution in the modern government system. Undoubtedly nowadays society is extremely knowledgeable and familiar with the daily operations of the government. Therefore, the government must please the public and good governance produces the conditions for this. India's democratic circumstances over the past 60 years has made it clear that good governance ought to be directed towards social empowerment and the eradication of poverty.
