ABSTRACT

The article discusses speech acts and classification of speech acts, aspects of the analysis of a speech act. It also deals with the five basic kinds of illocutionary acts are: representatives (or assertives), directives, commissives, expressive, and declarations. The theory of speech acts distinguishes three levels, or aspects of the analysis of a speech act. First, a speech act can be viewed as actually saying something. He only gave characteristic examples of such acts - question, answer, informing, assurance, warning, appointment, criticism, etc., noting that each language has its own nomenclature of such actions.
