ABSTRACT

A person's attitude to existence is a product of his experiences, life beliefs, views, and has a centuries-old history of development. A person's attitude to reality is manifested through various actions, voices, signs that represent experiences and emotional states. In addition, the feelings of a person are expressed through words and facial expressions. The attitude expressed by man towards nature and society, presentness is also reflected in woven stories. Humans expressed their relationship to the world of plants, mountains, and animals. In legends and narratives, people's attitude towards bravery and courage are expressed, and the people around them gave it an immediate assessment. They analyzed the reality in detail and expressed their conclusions. They conveyed their emotional experiences to the people around them through words.
