ABSTRACT

Children today live surrounded by modern gadgets; we take them with us everywhere, including to school, home, and the street. Many of us find it increasingly difficult to picture our lives without the technological advancements of the present era—gadgets, whose significance in our lives can vary greatly. The English term "gadget," which means "device, fixture," is where the word "gadget" originates. The characteristics of the dependence on the gadget are the subject of opinions and feedback from preschoolers.
